Therefore, you can now browse the Internet in a secure manner. With the server acting as a “tunnel”, no one will be able to intercept any information, not even hackers. A: It sounds like you want to merge dicts: >>> d1 = {1:'foo', 2:'bar'} >>> d2 = {2:'xyz',3:'foo', 5:'bar'} >>> d1.update(d2) >>> d1 {1: 'foo', 2: 'xyz', 3: 'foo', 5: 'bar'}

Q: Bash Script - Iterate Through Files and Iterate through Files in New Lines and Append New Lines I have a file, file1.txt, which contains a list of strings like the following: apple,orange carrot,grapes orange,apple carrot,grapes The file also contains other strings separated by spaces, which are currently not important. I also have another file, file2.txt, which I would like to iterate through each line of file1.txt and store each string in an array, $array. For example, the contents of file1.txt could be: apple,orange carrot,grapes I want to have an array that looks like this: $array[0]=apple,orange $array[1]=carrot,grapes A problem I am having is that I don't know how to iterate through the first file and create an array in bash. This is what I tried:

#!/bin/bash
file1="/home/username/file1.txt"
while read line1
do
    line2=`cat file1`
done
```
