Zoom is the new Mac keyboard and trackpad gesture and shortcut control tool that is designed to transform a Mac or iOS device into a powerful productivity tool. The Zoom program, developed by Logitech, has received an update to version 1.2.1. This minor update to the mouse-driven tool is comprised of a few fixes and improvements. Among the changes in version 1.2.1, you can now activate the Zoom program by simply clicking the mouse. Previously, the user had to use a keyboard shortcut to open Zoom's main window. In addition, a new zoom setting has been added in the Settings section. You can adjust the degree of zoom in and out and specify whether you want to take a snap shot of the screen using the mouse. Moreover, you can also customize the keyboard shortcut for opening Zoom's main window. Final thoughts Zoom is an interesting mouse-driven tool that offers you the ability to create shortcut keys and shortcuts for changing the way you navigate your Mac and iOS devices. However, despite the program being aimed at users of Apple products, it can be compatible with Windows machines as well. Despite the fact that Zoom allows you to change the keyboard and trackpad shortcuts that are used to control the program, the interface is designed for the users of Apple products. The program supports a variety of keyboard and trackpad shortcuts for adjusting the mouse cursor, zoom in and out, snapping a photo, and switching between different modes. The program does not support shortcuts that are specific to the Mac or the iOS, and it does not support customizations for users of Windows systems. Therefore, if you are not comfortable with the use of mouse and keyboard shortcuts, you may not find the software useful.

However, as long as you are capable of operating the Apple devices, the program is certainly worth trying out. 4/5 Zoom is the new Mac keyboard and trackpad gesture and shortcut control tool that is designed to transform a Mac or iOS device into a powerful productivity tool.
